

(‘Wake Tere’ – sailboat in the Te Papa museum in Wellington)

I am going to visit the Netherlands

A few weeks ago as staff team we went to Wellington, to get away for the weekend. On our way to Wellington we stopped for lunch. Just as I was talking to someone about not having my visa yet, I got an email from Immigration saying that they approved my visa. That means I can stay in New Zealand!

In Wellington we went to the Te Papa museum, which is the national museum of New Zealand. (Picture at the top is of a Maori sailboat in the museum)

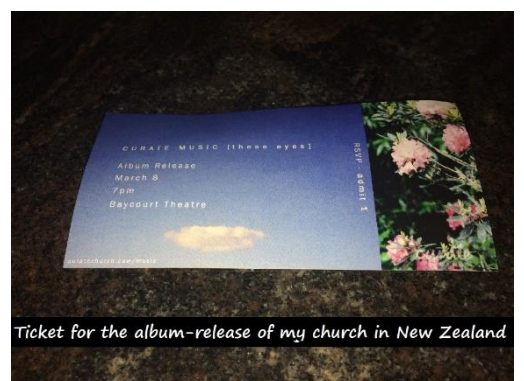

My borther in law Jerry and my newborn niece Tanja

On our way back from Wellington I checked my bank account and my parents had given me a gift to buy tickets to visit home. I have already bought the tickets. I will be visiting the Netherlands for 5 weeks!!! I expect to arrive in the Netherlands on the 29th of March and stay until the 4th of May. During my time in the Netherlands I will be visiting friends and family. If you would like to visit or you would like me to visit you, please send me an email.

To make it all a little better, my sister just gave birth to an amazing girl; Tanja Rebekka. I am looking forward to meeting her.

The church I go to in New Zealand just published a new cd. With a few of our staff we went to the album release. It was amazing to see them pour their hearts out in worship through this music. The album is available on Itunes and Spotify and is called ‘These Eyes’ by Curate Music.
